

THE BLUE CARD CALENDAR

THE BLUE CARD is a charitable organization aiding Nazi victims since 1934. It is dedicated to the support of European Jewish survivors and their descendants in this country, who still suffer from the aftereffects of Nazi persecution, are sick or emotionally unstable, have been unable to achieve economic independence, or have lost it through sickness or old age; in many cases the Holocaust has deprived them of family. The Blue Card's activities aren't duplicated by any other Jewish welfare agency. During the year 2016, The Blue Card made grants amounting to over $3.1 million. This brings the grant total since The Blue Card's inception to over $35 million.

THE BLUE CARD continues to receive four-star ratings from Charity Navigator, a distinction awarded to only four percent of all charities. The Blue Card is Better Business Bureau (BBB) accredited.

THE BLUE CARD mirrors the social conscience of our community. We hope it will be important to you, and that you will remember it in your last will. Your contribution is fully tax deductible.

THE BLUE CARD has been publishing this calendar for its friends and friends-to-be for more than 50 years in order to remind them, throughout the year, that there is an organization which is always ready to render assistance to our neediest.

PLEASE SEE the inside back cover of this calendar for more information about The Blue Card.

INTRODUCTION

Films offer us a way to view the past through many lenses and to live the full range of human experience. The best films transport us to other times and places and make vivid the experiences of others, so that we leave profoundly affected and made wiser.

Not surprisingly, the experience of the Holocaust, which involved so much of the world and which was the cause of war, murder and inhumanity — and also heroism and kindness — has been a fertile source for films.

In this year's calendar, we look at narrative films about the Holocaust that have made a strong impression. (We've chosen to omit documentaries, of which there are many that bring home the enormity of the experience.) Of course, even the most fictional of movies about the Holocaust is grounded in the reality of what happened, and in our knowledge of that reality.

These films view what happened through many lenses, in many places, and with many points of view. We have films set in Poland, Germany, Austria, Slovakia, Italy, France, Holland and New York.

Some of these films tell individual tales of survival, as do so many Holocaust memoirs. In Europa Europa, the Jewish protagonist poses as a member of the Aryan elite. Life Is Beautiful is the tale of a father willing to go to extraordinary lengths to keep his son alive. In The Shop on Main Street, one of the central characters must decide whether to turn in an elderly Jewish woman or else risk his own life. The Diary of Anne Frank is of course based on the diary of the young woman who hid in an attic in Amsterdam, and The Pianist is about a musician who hid in Warsaw.

Schindler's List is the epic story of a man who became consumed with the effort to rescue the Jews in his employ, who through guile and force of will succeeded in saving 1,200 of them.

The Garden of the Finzi-Continis and Woman in Gold are in part elegies to a way of life that was destroyed by the Holocaust.

Sarah's Key and Ida deal with the war's aftermath, and how the things that happened during the Holocaust continue to affect us. Nothing could be more relevant to The Blue Card's mission.

Virtually all these movies deal with difficult moral choices that people were forced to make. It's the central theme of Sophie's Choice, Judgment at Nuremberg and The Counterfeiter, among others.

And The Great Dictator shows the enormous power of satire, and how it can be a force for truth and even outrage.

What these diverse films have in common is the depiction of the humanity of those who became victims of the Nazis. That humanity comes in different forms and is depicted in many different ways, but is a reminder that the good in people can never be fully extinguished.

The films mentioned here comprise a partial personal list of works that have affected me — a list that's by no means comprehensive. No doubt the readers of this calendar will have seen others that they have cared deeply about. You can find a lengthy list of films about the Holocaust at <http://bit.ly/HolocaustFilms>. Fortunately, these days it's quite easy to locate most of them online.

— Ralph Hammelbacher

This year's edition was edited by Ralph Hammelbacher. Hella Hammelbacher created the original design, which was ably realized by Jacqueline Enrique.

Liam Neeson as Oskar Schindler, and Ben Kingsley as the accountant Itzhak Stern.

Steven Spielberg is the director and producer of one of the great films of all time, a towering achievement: Schindler's List. This epic 1993 work recounts the true story of Oskar Schindler, a German industrialist whose efforts saved the lives of some 1,200 Polish Jews during World War II. The story has become well known: initially motivated by the desire for profit, Schindler became increasingly caught up in the cause of saving the lives of those in his employ, using a succession of inventive strategies. The movie's coda is the moving appearance of many of the surviving Schindlerjuden at Mr. Schindler's grave in Jerusalem.

The responses from critics, scholars and audiences was overwhelmingly positive, and it won plaudits for its realistic depiction of the conditions of the Holocaust, including the concentration camps and the liquidation of the Krakow ghetto. It won seven Academy Awards and a host of other honors. It also helped inspire Spielberg to found the USC Shoah Foundation and the Righteous Persons Foundation, "to collect and preserve the testimonies of survivors and other witnesses of the Holocaust."

We would like to recognize Sol Urbach, an extended Blue Card Board member who is one of those saved by Oskar Schindler. In 2010, Sol's story was documented in a video by Yad Vashem. Sol married his wife Ada in 1950, and so this year the Urbachs have been married 67 years. Sol and Ada are parents of Barbara Urbach Lissner, the wife of Michael D. Lissner, who is Chairman of The Blue Card's Board.

Helen Mirren as Maria Altmann and Ryan Reynolds as Randy Schoenberg, with the painting Portrait of Adele Bloch-Bauer.

Woman in Gold, from 2015, tells the true story of Maria Altmann, who grew up in a wealthy family in Vienna and managed to escape to the United States. As an elderly woman, she reads in her late sister's letters how the family had attempted to recover artwork left behind in Austria that was stolen by the Nazis. The greatest of these works was the painting by Gustav Klimt known as the Woman in Gold, one of Klimt's two portraits of Altmann's beloved aunt, Adele Bloch-Bauer.

Ultimately, thanks to the work of attorney Randy Schoenberg, Altmann is successful in recovering that and other paintings — and in the process, she reconnects with her past and Schoenberg learns about his own. And Schoenberg comes to understand why this is so important to Altmann.

The real-life painting is on permanent display in the Neue Galerie in New York City.

Solek, played by Marco Hofschneider, with Leni, the girl with whom he has a mutual attraction, played by Julie Delpy.

The 1990 film Europa Europa is based on the true story of German-born Solomon "Solek" Perel, as published in his 1989 autobiography. He managed to survive the Holocaust by posing not only as a Gentile, but as a member of the Hitler Youth. Kristallnacht takes place on the day that was to be Solomon's Bar Mitzvah, and the surviving family move to Lodz, Poland. Solomon, sent away in the hope he would survive, ends up in a Soviet orphanage. Captured by the Germans, he convinces them that he is a German Aryan named Josef Peters. His actions cause the Germans to consider him a hero, and he is sent to a Hitler Youth school. Knowing that he will be revealed as a Jew if it is seen he is circumcised, he avoids a school medical examination and having relations with the girl he is attracted to. At the war's end, he surrenders to the Soviet Army, saying he is a Jew. About to be executed, his life is saved when he is recognized by his brother, who is just being released from a concentration camp.

The film, released to little fanfare, became one of the most lauded German films ever.

Life Is Beautiful was co-written and directed by Roberto Benigni, who also starred in the film in the role of Guido. Before the war, Guido comically pursues and eventually wins the heart of Dora, who is at first reluctant to leave her pompous fiancé but decides to run off with Guido. Five years later, with a son, they end up in a death camp (Guido is Jewish, and Dora chooses to go to the camp as well). At the camp, Guido invents a game for his son with tasks to fulfill that will keep his son away from the guards. In the end, Guido is executed just before Allied troops arrive, while his son survives to be liberated and reunited with his mother.

The film won three Academy Awards including Best Foreign Language Film, but was controversial for its use of humor in the setting of a concentration camp. The film succeeds because Benigni brings it off without becoming maudlin.

Meryl Streep and Peter MacNicol as Sophie and Stingo.

Sophie's Choice, released in 1982, is a faithful adaptation of William Styron's partly autobiographical novel of the same name. In a Brooklyn boardinghouse, the young writer Stingo befriends Sophie, a Polish Catholic immigrant, who is living with her unstable lover, Nathan. As the movie unfolds, Sophie reveals her story: that during the war, her father sympathized with the Nazis, even as Sophie's lover during those years, Józef, was part of the Resistance. After Józef was killed by the Gestapo, Sophie was deported to Auschwitz with her children. (Part of the Auschwitz story is revealed in a gripping flashback.) Sophie's terrible secret: when she arrived at Auschwitz, she had to choose which of her two children would live and which one would die.

The novel and film deal with impossible decisions, and make the case that others in addition to Jews were victims of the Holocaust — somewhat controversially, as some critics argued it downplayed Jewish suffering.

Meryl Streep's brilliant performance as Sophie earned her an Oscar for Best Actress.

Burt Lancaster, playing Emil Janning, and Spencer Tracy, as Dan Haywood, in Janning's jail cell. When Janning tells Haywood, "I never knew it would come to that," Haywood replies, "It came to that the first time you sentenced a man to death you knew to be innocent."

Judgment at Nuremberg deals with questions of moral culpability for the actions of the Nazis. This 1961 film is a fictionalized version of the actual Nuremberg trial of German judges, with Spencer Tracy playing Dan Haywood, head of a three-judge panel. The Germans are being tried for decisions that enforced Nazi laws calling for the execution or jailing of people whom the judges knew were innocent. It raises the question of whether people were guilty for "just following orders," and answers in the affirmative.

The film, directed by Stanley Kramer, had a number of brilliant acting performances and won accolades including eleven Academy Award nominations and three Oscars. It is widely considered one of the greatest courtroom dramas, in large part for the complexity of the issues and for the honesty with which it deals with them.

Ida Kaminska as Rozalia Lautmannova, and Jozef Kroner as Tono Brtko.

The extraordinary 1965 Czechoslovakian film The Shop on Main Street portrays the effects of "Aryanization" on places far removed from the centers of conflict during the Holocaust, and it shows how the vast moral issues raised by the Holocaust filtered down to even the simplest lives.

The elderly Mrs. Lautmannova, a Jew who is deaf and confused, owns a sewing shop in a small city. Tono Brtko, a decent man who is offered the chance to take over the store, finds out that it is unprofitable and dependent on donations. The Jewish community, worried that someone much worse would replace Tono were he to leave, offers to support the shop. Tono moves in, telling Mrs. Lautmannova he is her nephew, and the two develop a warm friendship. But the day comes when the Jews of the town are to be transported to a concentration camp, and Tono is faced with the choice of whether or not to turn her in and by doing so save himself. The outcome is devastating.

The film won the 1965 Oscar for Best Foreign Language Film, and Ida Kaminska was nominated for Best Actress for her role as Mrs. Lautmannova.

In the garden, before the war.

The Garden of the Finzi-Continis is a 1970 film by the Italian director Vittorio de Sica which won the Academy Award for best foreign-language film. Based on a novel by Giorgio Bassani, it begins in Ferrara in the late 1930s, where wealthy residents gather in the walled garden of a Jewish family for tennis, socializing and other pleasures. They remain passive even as they lose one privilege after another, but the high walls cannot isolate them from the gathering storm of the advent of the Nazis and war. Bruno, the Gentile lover of the female protagonist Micol, is sent to the Russian front, where he is killed. By 1943, all the Jews have been rounded up and as the audience, we know that most if not all will perish.

The film, shot in gorgeous color, is both an elegy to a past time and a commentary on the obliviousness and passivity of those whose world is about to be taken away from them.

Millie Perkins playing Anne Frank, and Joseph Schildkraut as her father, Otto Frank.

Of the many adaptations of the book The Diary of Anne Frank, the 1959 film made by George Stevens stands out among the finest. The story of how the Frank family hid in the annex of a house in Amsterdam during World War II is well known, as is how Anne's literary talent blossomed as she described the relationships around her, her growth into young womanhood, and her dreams and aspirations. The book is a classic, and the house is now a museum that has drawn tens of millions of visitors since its opening in 1960.

The movie is notable for how vivid it makes the real-life drama of eight people hiding for two years in the claustrophobic confines of an attic. It is acted, staged, lit and photographed so realistically that viewers feel as if they have experienced it themselves.

Ten-year-old Sarah Starzynski, played by Mélusine Mayance.

Sarah's Key is based on the best-selling novel by Tatiana de Rosnay. In the film, released in 2011, Kristin Scott Thomas plays Julia Jarmond, a journalist living in Paris who is driven to investigate what happened in her husband's grandparents' apartment in 1942. She learns that as Jews were being rounded up and taken to the Vélodrome d'Hiver, a young girl named Sarah locked her brother in a secret closet to keep him safe, taking the key with her. From the Vélodrome d'Hiver, Sarah is moved to a camp from which she manages to escape.

Eventually returning to the apartment, Sarah learns what happened to her brother, a horror that haunts her for the rest of her life. In the film, her fate is intercut with that of the journalist, whose own life becomes transformed by what she has learned. And we learn how some of the French, good and bad, behaved toward their own.

The film, released in 1940, was criticized for turning Nazism into comedy, and Chaplin said later that had he known at the time about the full horrors of the concentration camps, he would not have made it. But it remains a classic, and the barber's speech at the film's end is regularly posted to social media.

Agata Trzebuchowska as Anna/Ida, and Agata Kulesza as Wanda.

Polish writer-director Pawel Pawlikowski's 2013 film Ida is set in the 1960s and tells the story of Anna, a young novice. Anna was an orphan raised in a convent, and she is about to take her vows as a nun. Told by the Mother Superior to talk to her only living relative, her aunt, Wanda, Anna discovers that her real name is Ida Lebenstein, she is Jewish, and that her parents were killed in World War II. Wanda herself smokes and drinks, is promiscuous, and is a judge who prosecuted Polish war criminals.

The film explores with subtlety and depth many of the questions this raises: the tension between Anna's Catholic faith and her Jewish ancestry, the differences between the reserved Anna and her outspoken aunt, Anna's awakening, and the roles that Polish Gentiles played during the war.

Filmed in black and white, with austere images of the Polish countryside, Ida is an extraordinarily gripping film.

Karl Markovics in the role of Sally Sorowitsch.

In The Counterfeiters Sally Sorowitsch is a low-life Jewish criminal in Berlin whose specialty is the skillful forgery of passports and currency. Arrested by the German police, he ends up in the Sachsenhausen concentration camp, where he is assigned to a special section of the camp devoted to forgery. Conditions in that unit are far better than those in the camp as a whole.

While Sally is a fictional character, the story is based on an actual forgery unit, whose task was to produce fake currency to destabilize the economies of the Allies. Another of the inmates in the forgery group is Burger, who works to slow the counterfeiting process as an act of sabotage against the Nazis. Sally, on the other hand, is an artist more concerned with self-preservation — a complicated criminal with a code of honor.

The film raises questions of how much collaboration is ethical, if the tradeoff is relative comfort and the possibility of survival. Stefan Ruzowitzky directed this 2007 release, which was based on a memoir by Joseph Burger. It won the Academy Award for Best Foreign Language Film.

Adrien Brody as Wladyslaw Szpilman.

Roman Polanski's 2002 film The Pianist is based on the autobiography of the Polish pianist and composer Wladyslaw Szpilman. It opens with Szpilman playing piano over the radio as Warsaw is bombed during the German invasion. In vivid terms, we see him forced into the Warsaw Ghetto; as a slave laborer; back in the ghetto, in hiding; as a witness to the Warsaw Uprising; and hiding in the ruins after Warsaw's destruction. In an abandoned house, Szpilman is discovered by a Nazi soldier, who aids him and supplies him with food. After the war ends, Szpilman attempts to free the soldier from a Soviet POW camp, but by the time Szpilman gets there, the camp is gone.

The film is notable for its extraordinary realism and for how it unsparingly portrays Szpilman's transformation from sophisticated artist to someone whose survival depends on his wits, luck, and the kindness of others.

Established in Germany in 1934, The Blue Card's sole purpose was to provide financial assistance to Jews fleeing from that country's growing persecution. It was re-established in the United States in 1939, to continue aiding refugees escaping from the Nazi horror. Today, it is the only organization in the United States whose sole mission is to aid needy Holocaust survivors by providing cash assistance.

Description of Our Programs

The Blue Card provides assistance through the following core programs:

- Emergency Cash Assistance Program: provides for survivors' most immediate needs by helping with the cost of medicine, rent, homelcare, food and other essentials. The Holocaust Survivor Emergency Cash Assistance Program is funded by the Claims Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany.
- Dental Program: named after Curt C. and Else Silberman, provides much needed funding toward dental care, especially in a time of federal budget cuts.
- Home Health Program: named after Hildegard Lash, is a health service provided in the survivors' home to promote, maintain, or restore health or lessen the effects of illness and disability. The purpose of the program is to ensure safe and independent living.
- Stipend Program: supports the most poverty-stricken survivors with monthly checks.
- Jewish Holiday Program: provides financial assistance for the High Holidays, Hanukkah and Passover, giving survivors the financial means to have a happier holiday season.
- Summer Vacation Program: named after Adolph and Lotte Rosenberg, offers a free summer vacation program to needy survivors in the New York area. Survivors are provided with handicapped-accessible accommodations, transportation, scheduled meals, and a well-planned itinerary, making the program structured, safe, and group-oriented.
- The Telephone Emergency Response Program: named after Jakob Mogilnik, provides an emergency response system to Holocaust survivors who do not have the financial resources for installation, service and maintenance. In case of an emergency such as a fall, the survivor presses a button (either around the neck or on the wrist), activating an automated speakerphone. The operator answers in the survivor's native language, and follows up should there be an emergency.
- Mazel Tov Birthday Program: provides survivors with a check and a card on their birthday. Receiving a birthday card means a great deal to survivors who lost their entire families during the war.
- Vitamins Program: provides Holocaust survivors with multivitamins, minerals, supplements, and liquid meals.
- Bring a Smile Program: named after Sonia and Max Lonstein, provides additional support for terminally ill Holocaust survivors. The program essentially grants survivors their final wish.
- The Siegi B. Wilzig Fighting Cancer Together Program: offers aid to Holocaust survivors battling cancer. Assistance is available for transportation to appointments, medical co-pays, nutrition and emotional support.
- The Blue Card-Lissner Hospital Visitation Program: offers volunteer visits to hospitalized Holocaust survivors who need guidance and emotional support.

• The Nutritional Guidance Program: named after Rita Berkowitz, provides monthly food stipends and nutritional supplements. It also educates participants on proper nutrition.

• JFNA Federal Grant: The Blue Card has been awarded a two-year grant in the amount of $200,000 from The Jewish Federations of North America. This grant will allow us to train dentists and doctors in using Person-Centered, Trauma-Informed (PCTI) Care while treating Holocaust survivors. Person-Centered, Trauma-Informed Care emphasizes the importance of remaining mindful of the lingering impact of trauma when treating trauma survivors, so that they can receive medical and dental care without being triggered into reliving the trauma they have endured. It is our hope that the trainings made possible by this grant will allow Holocaust survivors throughout the United States to receive the proper dental and medical care they so deserve.

In 2016, The Blue Card distributed $3,104,492 to destitute Holocaust survivors in the United States; below is the breakdown of that number.

I.	Homelcare	$927,154
II.	Emergency Cash Assistance	$777,472
