

THE BLUE CARD CALENDAR

Assisting Holocaust
Survivors in Need

THE BLUE CARD is a charitable organization that has been aiding Holocaust survivors since 1934. It is dedicated to the support of survivors of Nazi persecution and their descendants in this country, who still suffer from the effects of Nazi persecution, are sick or emotionally unstable, have been unable to achieve economic independence, or have lost it through sickness or old age; in many cases the Holocaust deprived them of family. The Blue Card's activities aren't duplicated by any other Jewish welfare agencies. During the year 2023, The Blue Card distributed over $2.0 million. This brings the grant total since The Blue Card's inception to over $50 million.

THE BLUE CARD continues to receive a four-star rating from Charity Navigator, a distinction awarded to only four percent of all charities. The Blue Card is Better Business Bureau (BBB) accredited.

THE BLUE CARD mirrors the social conscience of our community. We hope it will be important to you, and that you will remember it in your last will. Your contribution is fully tax deductible.

THE BLUE CARD has been publishing this calendar for its friends and friends-to-be for more than 50 years in order to remind them throughout the year that there is an organization which is always ready to render assistance to our neediest.

PLEASE SEE the inside back cover of this calendar for more information about The Blue Card.

INTRODUCTION

Recent decades have seen an enormous increase in antisemitism in many parts of the world, a trend that has accelerated still further in the last few years, most especially following the 2023 Hamas attack on Israel and the subsequent war in Gaza. The United States, which has long considered itself both a fair-minded society and a haven for those suffering persecution elsewhere, itself has a long history of antisemitism, which we will examine in this year's calendar.

There are many definitions of antisemitism, and what constitutes an antisemitic statement or act is a matter of some dispute. Some definitions include words, images or deeds denigrating the State of Israel as antisemitic. But a straightforward definition called the Jerusalem Declaration on Antisemitism, released in 2001 and endorsed by 200 scholars, is this: "Antisemitism is discrimination, prejudice, hostility or violence against Jews as Jews (or Jewish institutions as Jewish)."

American antisemitism did not arise in a vacuum. Antisemitic beliefs have been around since ancient times and have manifested in a host of ways. The author Jerome Chanes divides historic antisemitism into three broad categories: "ancient antisemitism, which was primarily ethnic in nature; Christian antisemitism, which was religious; and the racial antisemitism of the 19th and 20th centuries."

A video series by the Anti-Defamation League described some of the types of antisemitic beliefs as follows: Jews have too much power; Jews are greedy; Jews murder non-Jews to use their blood for religious rituals ("blood libel"); Holocaust denial; anti-Zionism; Jews are disloyal to the countries where they live; and Jews committed deicide and are collectively responsible for the killing of Jesus. To that can be added the belief that Jews are materialistic and that they are clannish. The number of antisemitic tropes is seemingly infinite.

Throughout history, people have looked for scapegoats to blame for their misfortunes, and not infrequently those scapegoats have been Jews.

Antisemitism can be traced back to ancient civilizations including Greece and Rome, where Jews were often marginalized because of their distinct religious practices and their refusal to adopt the dominant cultures' polytheistic beliefs.

With the rise of Christianity, Jews were increasingly seen as outsiders. They were often blamed for the death of Jesus, leading to widespread persecution including massacres, forced conversions and expulsions from countries including England (1290), France (1306) and Spain (1492). Jews were often forced into specific professions such as moneylending. This led to further resentment and stereotypes about Jews and money.

During the Enlightenment, Jews faced political, social, and economic restrictions. They were often scapegoated for societal problems and subjected to discrimination.

The 19th century saw the rise of racial theories that categorized Jews as an inferior race. In many parts of Europe, Jews were confined to ghettos — segregated areas of cities where they lived under strict regulations.

Violent riots against Jews, known as pogroms, were common in Eastern Europe, particularly in the Russian Empire. These attacks were often state-sanctioned and resulted in significant loss of life and property. This culminated in the Holocaust during World War II, where six million Jews were systematically murdered by the Nazis.

The establishment of Israel in 1948 led to new tensions and forms of antisemitism in the Middle East. Today, antisemitism persists in much of the world in various forms, including hate crimes, conspiracy theories and discrimination.

In this year's calendar, we look at how antisemitism has manifested in the United States.

Ralph Hammelbacher edited this year's edition. Hella Hammelbacher created the original design, which Jacqueline Enrique ably realized.

New York in 1679.

The earliest Jewish immigrants to North America were primarily descendants of Spanish and Portuguese Jews who had been expelled from the Iberian Peninsula. The first organized Jewish migration to North America occurred in September 1654, when 23 Jews arrived in Nieuw Amsterdam (soon to become New York) from Recife, Brazil, having been forced to leave when the Portuguese defeated the Dutch there. The author Jonathan D. Sarna writes that the Dutch governor of Nieuw Amsterdam, Peter Stuyvesant, wanted them kept out and said they were “deceitful,” “very repugnant,” and “hateful enemies and blasphemers of the name of Christ.”

Stuyvesant was overruled by the Dutch East India Company, and the Jewish immigrants were allowed to remain and were given the right to travel, trade and own property. They were also allowed to worship — but initially only in private.

By 1682, Jews in New York purchased land to use as a cemetery. A 1695 map shows a synagogue on Beaver Street in lower Manhattan. In 1730, the community constructed what is now called the first Mill Street Synagogue.

By 1700, there were only a handful of Jews in the American colonies: an estimated 200-300 who were living as individuals and in small communities. Their treatment was not harshly discriminatory as it had been in other countries, but fell far short of full acceptance. In many places they were barred from practicing law, and they were in general subject to the prejudice at the time of most Christians that Jews were villains in the drama of the Crucifixion and that they could not be saved unless they accepted Jesus.

There were Jewish communities in many parts of the United States by 1840, with the largest numbers on the East Coast, but also many further afield — with a total population of about 15,000. Though Jews were often described in pejorative terms, for the most part they were not disturbed. Jews socialized with their neighbors and intermarriage was not uncommon.

A satirical 1882 cartoon contrasting Grant's "crocodile tears" over Russian persecution of Jews with his 1862 attempted expulsion of Jews from Tennessee.

The period between 1840 and 1880 saw the first large influx of Jews to the U.S., with about 200,000 arriving during that time. Most came from what is today Germany, France and parts of Poland, driven by European restrictions on occupations that Jews were allowed to hold and on how many Jews were allowed to marry, and by a desire for greater opportunity. Many male Jewish immigrants became itinerant peddlers, at least initially.

Those years saw a huge general increase in U.S. immigration, and with it came a rise in nativism and antisemitism. In 1850, a mob of 500 invaded a New York synagogue on Yom Kippur, responding to a false rumor that a group of Jews had killed a Christian girl for the holiday. In 1855 the speaker of California's House proposed a tax on Jews to keep them away. And in 1862, General Ulysses S. Grant, who would later become President, issued an order expelling Jews from his military district in Tennessee, which was promptly rescinded by Abraham Lincoln — who nonetheless relayed the message to Grant that he had no objection to the expulsion of "Jew peddlers." In the 1860s, after a series of fires in New York's garment district, a group of fire insurance companies agreed not to insure Jewish-owned businesses.

These major incidents took place against a persistent backdrop of antisemitic slurs and taunts directed against Jews. Few if any Jews failed to encounter some form of discrimination during this time.

An 1892 cartoon contrasting a wealthy Jewish businessman and a recent immigrant.

Jewish immigration to the U.S. accelerated greatly beginning around 1880, when Russian and other Eastern European Jews began arriving in large numbers. Unlike most of their predecessors, these Jewish families were fleeing for their lives as a result of pogroms that killed many and threatened many more. Between 1880 and 1924 about three million Eastern European Jews came to the United States.

Because the new arrivals were much poorer and less educated than earlier immigrants, they were looked down upon. Jews were increasingly viewed as coming from inferior racial stock rather than just being a group of people with traits considered “undesirable.” The antisemitic discrimination they encountered had severe effects. The historian Eric Goldstein said: “Jews faced discrimination in obtaining credit and loans; that they were refused employment in certain trades, industries, and professions; that they were prevented — sometimes by written covenants and sometimes by custom — from living in many neighborhoods; that many colleges and universities had anti-Jewish quotas; and that private clubs and resorts, fraternities and sororities, and other gathering places of the social and economic elites were often closed to them.”

Leo Frank.

While victims of lynchings in the American South have overwhelmingly been African American, a number of Jews have also been lynched. The first known lynching of an American Jew was that of Samuel Bierfield in Tennessee, in 1868. He was captured by suspected Ku Klux Klan members and shot. No one was ever prosecuted for the murder, despite the fact that the killers were well known to the community.

The best-known lynching of an American Jew is that of Leo Frank, a prominent member of the American Jewish community in Atlanta Georgia. In 1913, Frank was convicted on the basis of highly questionable evidence of the murder of a girl who worked at the factory he directed, and was sentenced to death. The case unleashed a torrent of antisemitism, which a national campaign unsuccessfully attempted to combat.

After Georgia's governor reduced Frank's sentence to life in prison, a mob abducted him from prison in 1915 and hanged him from a tree. No one was ever prosecuted for Frank's murder.

Frank's case contributed to the founding of the Anti-Defamation League in 1913.

Henry Ford receiving the Grand Cross of the German Eagle.

The decades prior to World War II saw many American universities establish quotas on the number of Jewish students admitted. Jews were restricted from buying homes in some neighborhoods, from staying at many hotels, and from joining clubs.

Those years also saw a number of prominent Americans and American organizations strongly promulgating antisemitic falsehoods. Among the individuals were Henry Ford, Charles Lindbergh and Father Charles Coughlin. Antisemitism was allowed a platform on the radio. Organizations promoting hatred and discrimination against Jews included the Ku Klux Klan (whose membership reached four million in the 1920s), the Christian Nationalist Crusade and the America First Committee.

Henry Ford bought the Dearborn Independent newspaper in 1918 and began a series of articles blaming Jews for most of the world's ills. Those articles were subsequently collected into four volumes. Ford also republished the notorious Russian forgery "Protocols of the Elders of Zion," which claimed that a group of Jews had met to plan the fate of the world. The Dearborn Independent received wide distribution all over the United States through Ford car dealerships.

In 1938, Ford received the Grand Cross of the German Eagle from the government of Nazi Germany, the highest honor bestowed on foreigners by that government.

Jews seeking to emigrate, in the Relief Organization of German Jews in Berlin, 1935.

There is no question that many lives of Jewish and other victims of the Holocaust would have been saved had the United States had more liberal immigration policies, but the highly restrictive quota system enacted in 1924 aimed to prevent the entry of people such as Eastern European Jews considered “racially undesirable.” The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum reports that in “June 1938, 139,163 people were on the waiting list for the German quota. One year later, in June 1939, the waiting list length had jumped to 309,782. A potential immigrant from Hungary applying in 1939 faced a nearly forty-year wait to immigrate to the United States.”

Refugee policy was also highly restrictive, and a Gallup poll in late November 1938 showed 72% of Americans opposed to allowing a larger number of Jewish exiles from Germany to come to the United States to live.

Marchers at the “Unite the Right” rally.

At the “Unite the Right” rally in Charlottesville, Virginia in August 2017, demonstrators carrying tiki torches chanted “Jews will not replace us” and “You will not replace us.” The great replacement conspiracy theory, popularized by the contemporary French writer Renaud Camus, holds that global elites, prominent among them Jews, are working to replace whites in Europe and the United States with nonwhite immigrants, and that they seek to replace Christianity with other religions.

This theory has gained a great deal of currency with American extremist groups, spurred by a Census Bureau prediction of questionable methodology that white, non-Hispanic people will be in the minority in the United States by the 2040s.

Similar theories go back many decades, with some white Americans believing that American bloodlines would be diluted by allowing what they considered inferior Catholic and Jewish immigrants from Southern Europe. That belief became widespread enough that its adherents secured the passage of the highly restrictive Immigration Act of 1924, which subsequently prevented the entry to the U.S. of many who would become victims of the Holocaust.

Memorials outside the Tree of Life Synagogue following the killings.

On the morning of October 27, 2018, a virulent antisemite named Robert Bowers attacked the Tree of Life Synagogue in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. Three services with a total of about 75 worshipers were underway. Armed with a semiautomatic rifle and three pistols, Bowers was able to keep firing for approximately twenty minutes, killing eleven people and injuring six. It was the deadliest antisemitic attack in American history. On April 27, 2019, in a crime inspired by that of Bowers, a gunman attacked a synagogue in Poway, California, killing one person and injuring three. Also in 2019, four people were murdered in a targeted attack at a kosher market in New Jersey.

Bowers drew inspiration from a vast reservoir of online hate, subscribing to a host of conspiracy theories, actively trading messages with neo-Nazis, and posting hate-filled messages on the website Gab. Some of his interlocutors expressed concern that the attack could interfere with their efforts to gain wider acceptance for their ideas, but many supported him. One man was later arrested, tried and convicted for threatening jurors at Bowers's trial. In 2023, Bowers was sentenced to death.

A hate group displaying banners and giving the Nazi salute in California in 2022.

The Anti-Defamation League tracks antisemitic incidents in the U.S., defined as “vandalism of homes/businesses/public areas, or harassment or assault on individuals or groups,” and “vandalism against Jewish religious institutions or cemeteries.” The increase in numbers in recent years has been extraordinary. From 912 such incidents in 2014, the number jumped to 3,698 in 2022 — a reflection in part of the political climate — and to 8,873 in 2023, of which 59% took place after the October 7 Hamas attack on Israel. These numbers included 161 cases of assault (with 196 victims), 2,177 incidents of vandalism and 6,535 incidents of harassment. Totals for 2024 have not yet been compiled, but are certain to be far higher.

The Blue Card has reported that the increase in American antisemitism has retraumatized many clients who are Holocaust survivors. The American Jewish Committee’s surveys state that “the majority of American Jews feel less safe in the United States.”

An online hate forum.

Making it harder to combat antisemitism is that fact that there is a vast agglomeration of loosely organized hate groups, along with an unknown number of lone individuals who sympathize with them. They have access to many online forums, some of them public, some of them private and difficult for outsiders to find. Antisemitic posters often use coded memes or “dog whistles” so that posts won’t be flagged by moderation software.

The better-known platforms such as Facebook, Instagram, TikTok, X (formerly Twitter) and YouTube reach huge numbers of people. Antisemitic posts on these forums are common and studies have shown that more than 80% are not removed. The resulting normalization of antisemitism greatly exacerbates its spread.

A host of organizations in the United States have antisemitism at their core. They have overlapping membership, extol Adolf Hitler and have goals that go far beyond instilling hatred for Jews: forbidding Jews from serving in government, the expulsion of Jews from the United States and ultimately the murder of Jews.

Pro-Palestinian demonstrators at Columbia University.

Late 2023 and 2024 saw protests on a large number of American university campuses against the war in Gaza and in support of Palestinians. The protests were for the most part directed against Israel and its conduct of the war, demanding that the universities divest their holdings in Israel and that the U.S. end its military support for Israel. Some demonstrations involved takeovers of campus buildings and the creation of encampments, some of which were later forcibly removed. The presidents of the University of Pennsylvania and Harvard resigned after giving legalistic answers to questions at a Congressional hearing about how they would respond to calls by students for the genocide of Jews. The president of Columbia University later resigned under pressure stemming from her handling of the protests.

There were many reports of Jewish students feeling unsafe as a result of comments made to them, and feeling targeted because of their religion.

George Soros.

The Jewish Hungarian-American philanthropist and political activist George Soros, born in 1930, has to many conspiracy theorists become the emblem of the “global elites.” Soros’s name is routinely invoked — without a hint of evidence — as being responsible for many ills.

Among the things he has been falsely accused of being are: a former Nazi (he in fact survived World War II as a teenager in Hungary); the “owner” of the ANTIFA and Black Lives Matter movements; the mastermind of the Women’s March that preceded the 2017 inauguration of Donald Trump; the instigator of protests against Brett Kavanaugh’s Supreme Court appointment; the financier of New York State’s prosecution of Donald Trump; and a sponsor of campus protests for a ceasefire in Gaza.

Citing Soros’s name has become shorthand among some individuals for blaming Jews for whatever they oppose — in other words, an antisemitic trope.

- The Anti-Defamation League, founded in 1913 and active since its inception. They describe their work in part as to: “monitor and respond to antisemitic incidents,” “speak out against antisemitic rhetoric,” “respond locally,” “educate,” “advocate for policy solutions,” “analyze data and produce research,” and “support Jewish communities.”
- The U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum, which has an extensive educational outreach program that includes workshops involving many local organizations, along with teaching plans and partnerships with hundreds of teachers all over the United States.
- The American Jewish Committee, established in 1906 and the oldest effective Jewish organization in the U.S. They issue an annual report called “The State of Antisemitism in America” and conduct training programs for elected officials, law enforcement officers, sports teams, entertainment companies and media companies.

Assisting Holocaust
Survivors in Need

Established in Germany in 1934, The Blue Card's sole purpose was to provide financial assistance to Jews fleeing from that country's growing persecution. It was re-established in the United States in 1939, to continue aiding refugees escaping from the Nazi horror. Today, it is the only organization in the United States whose sole mission is to aid needy Holocaust survivors by providing cash assistance. The Blue Card offers its invaluable help to Holocaust survivors through a variety of vital programs.

Description of The Blue Card's Programs

1. Claims Conference Emergency Cash Assistance Program

One-time grant assistance for emergency needs including:

- Housing and related costs such as late payments to prevent eviction, homelessness or utility shut-offs

- Emergency relocation
- Food purchases
- Medical and dental care, including medical equipment not otherwise covered by insurance
- Essential clothing and footwear
- Purchase and repair of essential major and minor appliances

2. Emergency Prevention Programs

- Monthly Stipend – supports the most poverty-stricken survivors with monthly checks.
- Telephone Emergency Response System – provides the system to Holocaust survivors who do not have the financial resources to pay for installation, service and maintenance.

3. Health and Well-being Programs

- Sigi B. Wilzig Fighting Cancer Together – offers aid to survivors battling cancer. Assistance is available for transportation to appointments, medical co-pays, nutrition and emotional support.
- Vitamins – provides survivors with multivitamins, minerals and supplements, as well as liquid meals.
- Jewish Holiday – provides financial support for the High Holidays, Hanukkah and for Passover, giving survivors the financial means to have a happier holiday season.
- Mazel Tov Birthday – provides survivors with a card and a check on their birthday. Receiving these mean a great deal to survivors who lost their entire families during the war.
- Adolph and Lotte Rosenberg Summer Vacation – This special program offers Holocaust survivors a fully accessible and enriching experience. Survivors enjoy handicap-accessible hotel accommodations, safe transportation, scheduled meals, and a thoughtfully planned itinerary. Every detail is designed to ensure a structured, safe, and inclusive environment, fostering a sense of community and connection among the group.

- Sonia and Max Lonstein Bring a Smile – provides addition support to terminally ill Holocaust survivors. The program essentially grants survivors their final wish.

4. Educational and Outreach Programs

- Nutrition Guidance – Educates Survivors on proper nutrition.
- The Blue Card-Lissner Hospital Visitation Program – offers volunteer visits to hospitalized Holocaust survivors who need guidance and emotional support.

5. The Blue Card - Tech Friendly Aging Programs

- LIFTWARE Utensils – Liftware is an electronic stabilizing handle and a selection of attachments that include a soup spoon, everyday spoon, fork, and spork. Liftware Steady is designed to help people with hand tremor, which may be related to Parkinson's disease or essential tremor, eat more easily. Holocaust survivors suffering with Parkinson's Disease and other debilitating illnesses benefit tremendously from this special stabilizing unit.
- Mood Restore Light Box – Intelligent Light Therapy - A special, compact and portable, UV free unit provides much needed light therapy to Holocaust survivors. In addition to effectively treating Season Affective Disorders (SAD), the Mood Restore Light Box, improves visual clarity and color rendering, as well as offset season weather and climate changes, and helps support the circadian rhythm regulation. This light box works wonders for thousands of our lonely survivors especially those who are shut-ins and are home-bound during the colder winter days.

- Companion Pets – Companion pets bring comfort and happiness to the older population with interactive, cats and dogs that replicate the look, sounds and feel of real pets. Many studies have found that these pets can enhance one's well-being and quality of life through companionship.
- FreeStyle Libre Glucose Monitoring Program – The Freestyle Libre 2 system continuously measures glucose data with customizable, optional real time alarms. The unit gives people with diabetes excellent accuracy and actionable information to better manage their condition.

To the Hebrew Congregation in Newport Rhode Island.

Gentlemen,

While I receive, with much satisfaction, your letter's replete with expressions of affection and esteem; I rejoice in the opportunity of assuring you, that I shall always retain a grateful remembrance of the cordial welcome I experienced in my visit to Newport, from all classes of citizens.

The reflection on the days of difficulty and danger which are past is rendered the more sweet, from a consciousness that they are succeeded by days of uncommon prosperity and security. If we have wisdom to make the best use of the advantages with which we are now favored, we cannot fail, under the just administration of a good Government, to become a great and a happy people.

The citizens of the United States of America have a right to applaud themselves for having given to mankind examples of an enlarged and liberal policy: a policy worthy of imitation. All persons shall abide liberty of conscience and immunities of citizenship. It is now no more that toleration is spoken of, as if it was by the indulgence of one class of people, that another enjoyed the exercise of their inherent natural rights. In the fully

The Government of the United States, which gives to liberty no sanction, to persecution no assistance, requires only that they who live under its protection, should consider themselves as good citizens, in giving it on all occasions their affectionate support.

It would be inconsistent with the frankness of my character not to avow that I am pleased with your favorable opinion of my administration, and foremost wishes for my felicity. May the children of the Stock of Abraham, who dwell on this land, continue to merit and enjoy the good will of the other inhabitants, while every one shall sit in safety under his own vine and fig-tree, and there shall be none to make him afraid. May the father of all mercies scatter light and not darkness in our paths, and make us all in our several vocations here, and in his own due time and way everlastingly happy.

George Washington
